A military-appearing photograph of the first mechanics' unit, which has been stationed at the University of Vermont at Burlington during the past two months, and which left Burlington Saturday forenoon for cantonments further south, has been the center of attraction for a large number of people during the past few days. The photograph is shown in the display window of the B. W. Hooker & Co. store.

Thirteen Barre boys left town this morning for Montpelier to report to Washington county local board, before whom they inducted for training in the mechanics' contingent. They left this noon for Springfield, Mass., where they are to enroll at the special service school in the Springfield high school. A large number of people were at the station to bid them goodbye. Methodists and Congregationalists united in morning services in the Hedding Methodist church Sunday, when Rev. F. L. Goodspeed of the Barre Congregational church preached a sermon on the lessons of the French revolution, the address being appropriate to the observance of Bastille day. Rev. B. A. Carlson was the preacher in the Graniteville Presbyterian church. A feature of the morning service at the First Baptist church was a violin solo by Miss Hazel Werner. In the evening, the union service, which was to have been held in City park, took place indoors, the speaker being H. J. M. Jones of Montpelier.

Violent showers spattered the week end weather map, and while two terrific storms Saturday and Sunday afternoons seem to be somewhat localized, nearly every town in Central Vermont was in the area of showers and experienced a down pour or two at one time or another. Here in Barre, the most spectacular electrical storm of the season occurred late Saturday afternoon. Heavy thundering prevailed and there were sharp flashes of lightning. A bolt struck the house at 20 East street occupied by the family of R. S. Currier. One corner of the roof was removed, and in some of the rooms the furnishings were displaced. There was no fire. So far as has been learned, the lightning did not damage property greatly in Barre or towns about. Gardens were flooded and in the outskirts lay lodged greatly. At East Barre the shower took the form of a hail storm. Another torrential shower of rain and hail passed over the city Sunday afternoon.

The Real Value of Service

Quality has always been recognized as one of the dominant factors in business building and success. But it is only of late years that we have come to recognize the prominent part which SERVICE plays in every phase of business intercourse, and understand its true value.

Not many years ago, it seemed to be the rule that when a sale was closed and goods delivered, the obligation of the seller to the buyer ceased. We have learned, however, that service is not only productive, but the lack is decidedly destructive, both of business already acquired and that which is in prospect.
